Of an old American plutocrat, who hated the Irish ilke poison, it is told that crossing the Atlantic for the first time he desired the steward to be sure to awaken him in the early morning on which they were due to sight the Irish coast in passing. Though the amorning was both wet and wild, and comfortless and cold, the poor old fellow gathered his garments about him and went out on deck and leaned over the bulwarks and took a good look at the green isle. And as he shuffled back over the deck again he said: "Thank God that I've lived to see one country the Irish don't run!"

And it is not only once, nor only fifty times that it has been said of us, "The Irishman is the best soldier that goes into a battlefield—anywhere out of Ireland."

In America, anyhow, the Irishman has been a marvelous success as a fighter, as a worked and as a—I was going to say ruler, but shall content myself with—politician. I have a Russian friend who says he was only a short time in America till he concluded that in this country every Chinaman was a washerwoman and every Italian an organ-grinder, but the Irish puzzled and organ-grinder, but the Irish puzzled and organ-grinder, but the Irish puzzled and an organ-grinder, but the Irish puzzled and an organ-grinder, but the Irish puzzled and organ-grinder, but the Irish puzzled and an organ-grinder, but the Irish puzzled and organ-grinder, but the Irish content and organ-grinder, but the Irish content and organ-grinder, but the Irish content and organ-grinder, but the Irish and organ-grinder, but the Irish content and organ-grinder, but the Irish content and organ-grinder, but the Irish home a rich man ten years ago and married his (deceased) landlord's was a washerwoman and every Italian an organ-grinder, but the Irish puzzled him to classify. At one time he thought every Irishman kept a saloon, then that he was a public prize fighter, next that he was a public prize fighter, next that he was a lawyer; in quick succession after that he was a policeman, a municipal officer, a navvy, a soldier, a ward boss, a judge, a servant girl, a city mayor, an orator, a criminal, a clergyman and a man pulling the wires of the universe. In his dileuma, he says, he appealed to an Irish friend for guidance. "Hagh!" said his friend, "Why, at home we're every mother's sen a king." "And that," said my Russian friend, "is the only blessed thing not one of you is in America," "Never mind," said he. "Perhaps we'll remedy that yet."

After looking about me in America, I saw conclusive proof that my countrymen were not, by Providence, intended for merely one or for merely thirty-one vocations. All arts, all trades, and all tricks, from California to Connecticut, have their large and faithful following of Irishmen; yet I modestly admit that be seems to fit best into his niche where he is dominating the crowd, and has yoked to his car the German, the Seandinavian, the Hun, the Dago and the American. around an earnest looking Kentuckian preacher, who was seeking from the Christian Chicagoan help for missionary work among the benighted heathen of his Kentuckian town.

This good man preached at his audience and prayed for them by turns, and a haggard, big framed fellow who stood by the preacher, bearing a standard, punctuated his master's prayers with intermittent, long drawn, "Praise God!" which was given with such an exquisite Irish brogue that my curiosity was very much awakened, for I had never seen an Irishman in such an office before. I saw well that Patrick had fallen upon evil times. Both his countenance and his crythes showed it, and the gapes in his boots spoke loudly to the same effect. His eye met mine at length, and the humor of the situation proving too much for me, I smiled, I fear, a rather quizzleal smile. The lines about the poor fellow's mouth being caught, he dropped his eyes to the ground. I edged around to where he stood, though he tried to frown me off. "Hard luck?" I whispered in his ear between responses. "The divil's own luck—Praise God!"
